What is a meme? (pronounced MEEM)

- Memes are an online medium expressing social and cultural thoughts.
- They are typically humor based, and geared toward a young adult audience.
- They usually consist of a widely recognized picture with a short caption on the top and bottom using impact font.

So, you're new here...

Once you get to college, you may think that because you were smart in high school (and maybe didn't put in a lot of effort), you don't need any help in college...

Start your freshman year off right!

Whelp, we all did well in high school... that's how we got into college!

Consider a session at the Writing Center to discuss new expectations for college writing assignments, so you can write with confidence!

Besides, college is so much fun!

Despite being advised to get help early, some of you will do quite the opposite...

After all, college is great! Your classes are self-driven, there's not much homework, and there's nobody looking over your shoulder.

What was this 'college is hard' hype all about?

Naturally, you start letting your social life get the best of you...

But then your grades start slipping.

Oh no! Weeks and weeks of slacking off have made your grades drop drastically.

You're failing your exams, and all those papers (that you've been procrastinating on) are piling up...

What are you going to do?

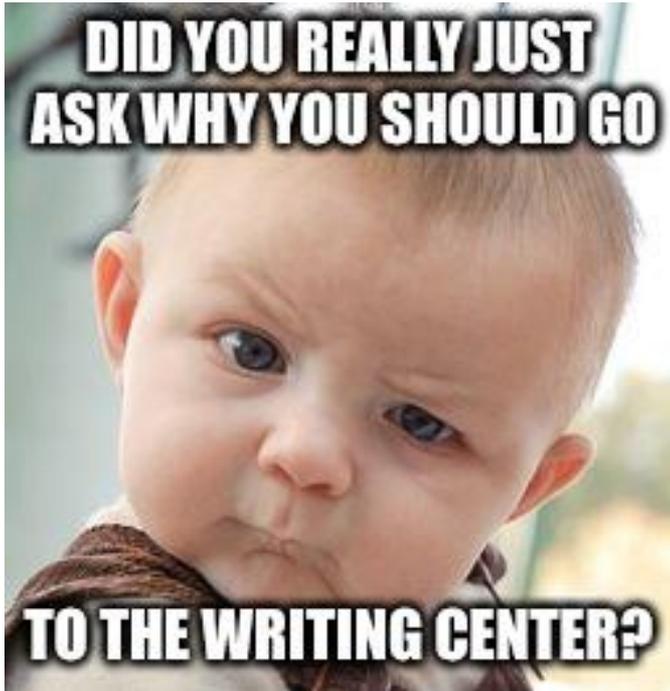

There has to be someone who can help, right?

You browse around and stumble upon the Writing Center! It must be your lucky day.

The Writing Center is a free student resource that will help you adapt to the changing expectations of college writing assignments, and work with you to improve your skills by walking you through the writing process.

You think: “I can figure it out on my own...”

But going to the Writing Center would mean you need help and you're too smart to be tutored... or are you? Getting help to be the best student that you can be makes you the smartest student.

Why wouldn't you utilize free resources to better your understanding and improve your work?

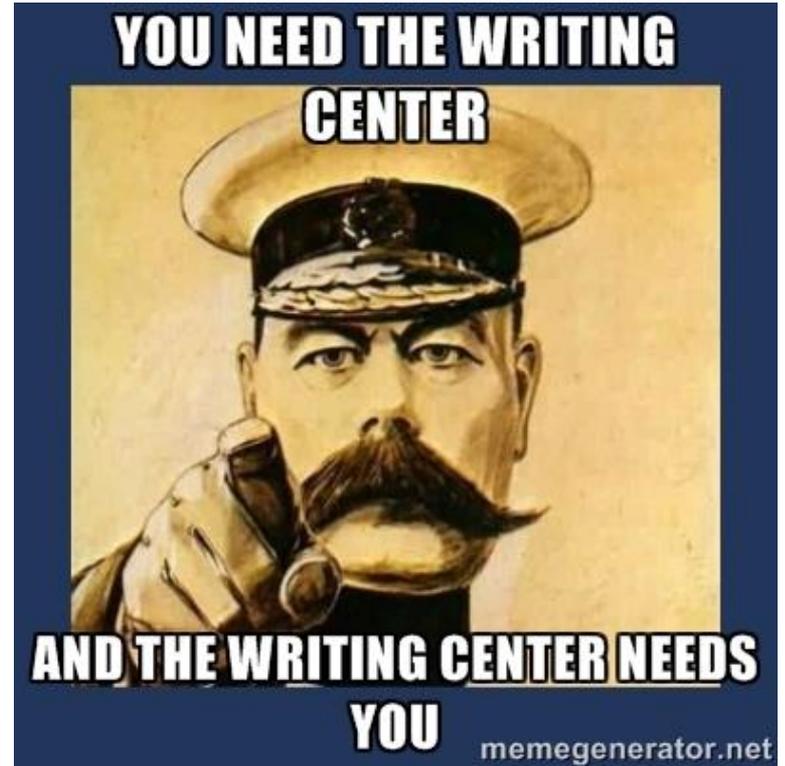

“Fine, I’ll go”...but now what?

Finally, you’ve decided to give the Writing Center a shot!

The hardest part about getting help is learning how to get help.

There’s a variety of ways to take the next step...

1. Go online and schedule an appointment.
2. Make your way to walk-in sessions.
3. Give the Writing Center a call to make your appointment.

Now for the anxiety to set in...

Using one of those methods you finally schedule an appointment!

But then you start to wonder if you should even go... what if they think my writing isn't good or I don't have good ideas? Have no fear, the Writing Center is here to help not criticize. At the Writing Center, tutors are there to walk you through the writing process no matter what stage you're at and answer any questions or uncertainties you may have. They are there for you.

Every question is a good one!

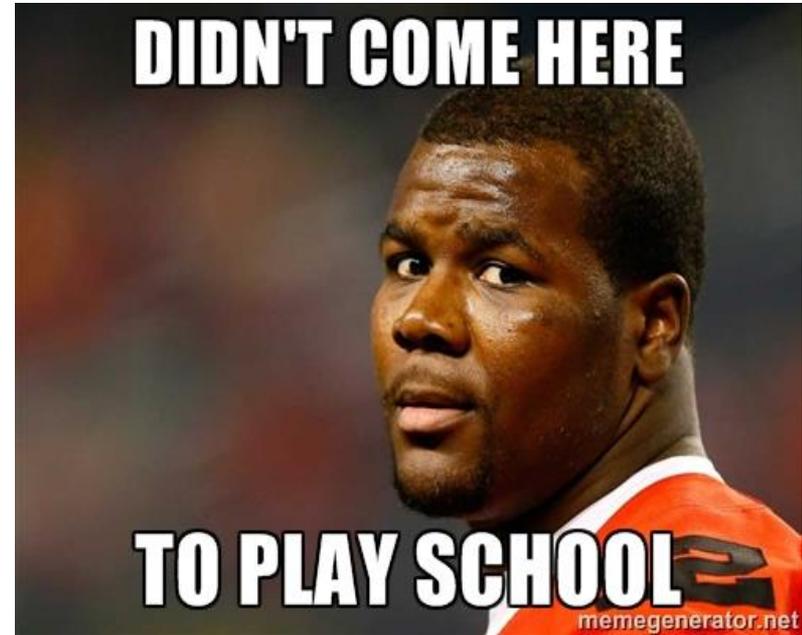

The visit is a success!

Despite all that stress and anxiety you go to your appointment and... it goes great! Now who would've thought!

Taking advantage of valuable resources around campus early on, such as the Writing Center, will help you be confident in tackling any assignment college throws at you.

After all, even though Cardale isn't at Ohio State to play school, you are!

Cardale has a coach...let the writing center be yours!
